A new classification of necrophilia

Anil Aggrawal MBBS, MD (Professor of Forensic Medicine) *

Maulana Azad Medical College, S-299, Greater Kailash-1, New Delhi 110 048, India

Article info

Article history:
Received 16 July 2008
Received in revised form 25 September 2008
Accepted 9 December 2008

Keywords:
Necrophilia
Necrophilism
Necrolagnia
Thanatophilia
Pseudonecrophilia

1. Introduction

Necrophilia, sexual gratification by having sex with the dead, is one of the most weird, bizarre and revolting practices of abnormal and perverse sensuality. Also known as necrophilism, necrolagnia, necrocoitus, necrochelis and thanatophilia, it may be seen alone or in association with a number of other paraphilias, namely sadism, cannibalism, vampirism (the practice of drinking blood from a person or animal), necrophagia (eating the flesh of the dead), necropedophilia (sexual attraction to the corpses of children) and necrozooophilia (sexual attraction to the corpses of or killings of animals – also known as necrobeastality).

DSM-IV-TR does not assign any specific or unique code to necrophilia. Instead along with several other uncommon paraphilias (seven of which are specifically named), necrophilia is grouped under the code 302.9 (paraphilias not otherwise specified).

1.1. Necrophilia in gravediggers and mortuary attendants

Gravediggers and mortuary attendants, who are most often found practicing necrophilia, engage in this activity perhaps because of their loneliness, coupled with easy access to corpses. It is also possible, that they chose this profession in the first place because they were necrophiles. It is known that necrophiles often chose a profession which allows them free and unhindered access to dead bodies.

In ancient times, when dead bodies were transported across nations by sea for last funeral rites (as in cases of deaths of people occurring in foreign countries), sailors were often accused of necrophilia. Long transportation periods along with loneliness and lack of witnesses allowed, and even encouraged sailors to commit acts of necrophilia with dead bodies.

In his seminal work, Psychopathia Sexualis, Richard von Krafft-Ebing called it a horrible manifestation of sadism. Abraham A. Brill, who published one of the earliest detailed studies of necrophilia in 1941, characterized necrophiles as mentally deficient, psychotic, and incapable of obtaining a consenting partner. Necrophilia has frequently been associated with cannibalism (necrophagia) and vampirism (drinking blood of humans) as all are considered perversions.

Necrophilia may be explained – in some cases at least – by the simple fact that the dead can not refuse, reject or resist; they also do not tell tales or talk back. Necrophagia may represent a “hang-over” from our evolutionary past, where carrion-eating was common.

2. Variations of necrophilia

Some variations on the theme of necrophilia are autonecrophilia (imagining oneself as a corpse or becoming sexually aroused by simulated corpses) and pseudonecrophilia. The term pseudonecrophilia has been used differently by different authors. Some authors take it to mean arousal from having sex with someone pretending to be dead, while others use the term to describe erotic fantasies of a person to have sexual relations with a dead body, and masturbation (but not actual contact). Still others use it to refer to a person who has a transient attraction to a corpse, but corpses are not the main object of his sexual fantasies. According to the latter definition, the preferable sexual contact in pseudonecrophiles remains a living person. Because of the multitude of meanings the term pseudonecrophilia has come to acquire, it is preferable to do away with this term entirely and follow the classification system suggested below.

3. Proposed classification of necrophilia

Some classifications of necrophilia already exist. Rosman and Resnick classify all necrophiles in three groups with an additional category of pseudonecrophilia. However with more literature pouring in since their suggestion, a newer classification is more appropriate. A new classification is also desirable, because it tends to put an end of an enormous confusion currently centering around the term pseudonecrophilia. According to some authors it refers to an arousal from having sex with someone pretending to be dead, according to others it refers to people who find sexual stimulation in the presence of the dead, and according to yet others it refers to those persons who are normally content with having sex with the living, but given an opportunity, would have sex with the dead too. Quite obviously such a situation may generate considerable confusion among scientists trying to communicate among one another.

Some general classifications of diseases, especially DSM-IV-TR and ICD-10 have been devised precisely to prevent such kind of confusion occurring among scientists. This is achieved by assigning mathematical codes to diseases, instead of subjective names. Mathematical codes also enable easy computerization and communication. But neither DSM-IV-TR nor ICD-10 assign any specific or unique code to necrophilia, let alone its subclasses. DSM-IV-TR assigns code 302.9 (paraphilias not otherwise specified) to necrophilia along with several other uncommon paraphilias. ICD-10 too classifies necrophilia under the code F65.8 (other disorders of sexual preference) along with several other paraphilias such as telephone scatologia and frotteurism. A classification system is therefore urgently needed – preferably mathematical for easy computerization and communication – for all subclasses of necrophilia.

A ten tier classification – from class I till class X – is proposed in this paper in order to address this issue. As can be seen, the three different definitions of pseudonecrophilia mentioned earlier would now fall in three different classes according to the new proposed system – classes I, III and VII. Thus there is no scope for any confusion over terminologies. Instead of talking about subjective terms as pseudonecrophilia, one would refer to objective mathematical classes.

The proposed classification is based on severity of psychosexual disorder present among the necrophiles. This classification, besides being simple and elegant, appears to have an intuitive appeal. From the least innocuous to the most, all necrophiles may be categorized in following ten categories:

3.1. Class I necrophiliacs: role players

These people are only mildly pathological, since they seem to enjoy a kind of role playing. They do not have sex with a dead body, but get intense arousal from having sex with a living person pretending to be dead. It is a kind of sexual role play. Some authors have called this practice pseudonecrophilia. Some others have used the terms simulated necrophilia, and symbolic necrophilia. A more appropriate term appears to be necrobiophilia (from Greek bios, life) (from Greek bios, life). Certain Parisian brothels cater to this perversion; the prostitute is made up like a corpse with a pallid appearance, dressed in a shroud, and lies in a coffin (often known as casket sex). A person may want his sexual partner to cover her body with a whitish cosmetic to simulate blood-drained skin of a corpse, cover her in a plastic sheet and even add a toe tag before starting sexual intercourse. Some may utilize a resurrection fantasy where the lover brings the “dead” partner to life through sexual activity. The lover who pretends to be brought back to life may turn the tables on the other, dominating him, and even acting out a zombie fantasy.

Sometimes a vampire fantasy is involved where the lover simulates a killing by biting the neck. A case is recorded of a woman, who imagined herself to be a vampire. She would ask her husband to pretend he was dead and then stimulate his organ with her mouth. She would then pretend that the resulting erection was rigid, or mortis, and this would give her erotic pleasure.

3.2. Class II necrophiliacs: romantic necrophiles

These people show only very mild necrophilic tendencies. These are the normal bereaved people, who cannot bear separation from their loved ones. They do not seem to agree that their loved ones have died. They mummify their loved ones’ dead body (or parts of them) and continue relate sexually to them much as they did in life. Their psychopathology is only transient in nature, and they would normally recover as time passes. From a legal standpoint, classes I and II necrophiliacs are quite innocuous. There are no cases on record, where they have been prosecuted; class II necrophiliacs may be in need of psychiatric help though.

3.3. Class III necrophiliacs: People having a necrophilic fantasy – necrophilic fantasizers

Class III necrophiliacs are somewhat less innocuous from a legal standpoint. Psychosocially, they do show an aberrant behavior and are thus abnormal. These necrophiliacs do not engage in sexual intercourse with the dead. They are content simply with fantasizing sexual intercourse with the dead. They may visit cemeteries and funeral parlors often for this purpose, and merely the sight of dead bodies may give them erotic pleasure.

Some would like to have a sexual intercourse in the presence of a coffin, because it increases their orgasmic intensity. Some may be seen masturbating during funeral sermons or dirges as they sit in a crowd of mourners. These kinds of incidents have occurred at the Paris morgue several years ago, whereby a certain number of individuals were discovered, on different occasions, in the act of masturbating in front of the glass case where the cadavers were exposed. These incidents ultimately necessitated a well-directed surveillance system to prevent repetitions. Most paraphiliacs in the first three classes never get to touch a dead body. Those who never touch the dead but find sexual gratification merely from looking at them have been labeled platonic necrophilists, or platonic necrophiles. All these cases may be termed as cases of latent necrophilia or fantasy necrophilia, with the perverts known as latent necrophiles or fantasy necrophiles. As seen earlier, many authors have called this pseudonecrophilia. Taphophilia is the name given to people who get arousal from funerals.

3.4. Class IV necrophiliacs: tactile necrophiles

These necrophiles go one step ahead of class III necrophiles and need to touch a dead body in some erotic way in order to get an orgasm. They enjoy touching, stroking parts of the dead body, such as genitalia or breasts or perhaps licking them. Some may even take up jobs as mortuary attendants, or some other job dealing with the dead, because they want to be near dead bodies. They... insist that attendance at funeral homes (during visiting hours, of course) should be encouraged as an outlet for them. Medical students who get an erection while dissecting cadavers also fall in this group. Indeed Stekel mentions the case of a student who when dissecting a corpse during anatomy classes would have a sudden erection.\textsuperscript{14} Legally, in most jurisdictions, these necrophiles may be sued for disturbing the dead.

3.5. Class V necrophiliacs: people having a fetishistic necrophilia – fetishistic necrophiles

These necrophiliacs are a shade more abnormal than classes III and IV necrophiliacs, but they still do not engage in any copulatory activity with the dead. Instead, if they come across a dead body and if chance arose, they would cut up some portion of the body – perhaps a breast – for later fetishistic activities. They may even keep some portion of the dead body – pubic hair or a finger perhaps – in the pocket for continuous erotic stimulation, or sometimes may wear it as an amulet for similar pleasure. Some remove clothes, especially panties or even tampons from corpses to keep as fetish objects. These perverts are necrofetishists, and their paraphilia is known as necrofetishism. At first glance, they may appear to be similar to class II necrophiles, as the latter also engage in similar activities. However class II necrophiles preserve parts of their recently dead loved ones in order to fill up a psychosexual vacuum that their death has caused. They would not do so with the dead body of a stranger as do necrophiles of class V.

Martin Schurig (1856–1733) in his Spermatologia, describes the case of a Belgian lady, who secretly cut off the penis of her husband when he died and treasured it as a sacred relic in a silver casket.\textsuperscript{15} She eventually powdered it and found it an efficacious medicine for sudden erection.\textsuperscript{14} Legally, in most jurisdictions, these necrophiles are either committing the crime of necromanic mutilation or being a necromanic necrophile. Rosman and Resnick\textsuperscript{8} describe this category under the term “necrophilic fantasy”. Wulffen\textsuperscript{17} describes this class under type necrophagy. These individuals also do not engage in sexual intercourse with the dead. However their erotic pleasure comes from mutilating the dead body and masturbating simultaneously. In some cases, the offender may eat parts of corpse as part of sexual gratification. Rajs and colleagues\textsuperscript{18} have described mainly four types of mutilations, of which necromanic mutilation is one.

Rosman and Resnick\textsuperscript{8} describe the case of a 40-year-old single white male, who fantasized killing a woman, cutting her up, removing her organs and then masturbating while immersing his hands in the blood of the corpse. His erotic pleasure came mainly from the mutilation of warm bodies. In his late 20s, he obtained a job in a morgue for the sole purpose of being near dead bodies, and being able to cut them up. His case represents a typical class VI necrophile. Many mortuary attendants and technicians belong to this category.

3.7. Class VII necrophiliacs: opportunistic necrophiles

Rosman and Resnick\textsuperscript{8} describe this category under the term “pseudonecrophilia”. Normally they are quite content having intercourse with the living and would not think of engaging in sexual intercourse with the dead. However if an opportunity arose, they would. Rosman and Resnick describe an interesting case under this category in which a 37-year-old single white male, who was dating a 49-year-old woman, and was having normal sexual relations with her. One day he accidentally shot her under the influence of alcohol. He panicked and tried to hide the dead body. When he was hiding her body, he became sexually excited and had anal intercourse with the corpse, and then disposed of it. He was aware of necrophilia and necrophiliacs as he had earlier read about them in pornography magazines.

Mortuary attendants, funeral workers and sailors who resort to sexual intercourse with the dead, because they have an easy access to them fall under this category.

Sometimes, a person may murder his consort for other reasons (say jealousy) and then have sexual intercourse with the dead body. Setia and Tabin\textsuperscript{19} describe a rare case where the accused killed his wife and then had sexual intercourse with her. The reason he gave in his testimony was that she had not consented to intercourse with him for last few years, as she was having an extramarital affair with someone else. Sometimes, she would have physical relations with her boy friend even in the presence of her husband, which frustrated him very much. There was no previous history of any psychiatric illness in the accused. The authors see the behavior of the accused as being a result of both jealousy resulting from his wife having extramarital affair, as well as frustration for not getting sexual gratification.

3.8. Class VIII necrophiliacs: regular necrophiles

These are the “classical” necrophiliacs, as one normally understands. Wulffen\textsuperscript{17} describes this class under type necrotrustum, and Rosman and Resnick\textsuperscript{8} under their sub-class “regular necrophilia”. They would not enjoy sexual intercourse with the living, even if this choice were available to them. Instead they would seek out a dead body to have sexual intercourse with, because they get more pleasure in having sex with a dead body. They would resort to stealing dead bodies from mortuaries or graveyards for this purpose. As seen above, a mortuary attendant who has an intercourse with the dead only because a dead body was easily available to him would not fall under this category. However if he preferred a dead body for sexual intercourse to living partners, he would come under this category. Regular necrophiles may have sexual intercourse with the living from time to time, but their preference remains sex with the dead.

Necrophiliacs in all categories are mostly males, but Rosman and Resnick\textsuperscript{8} describe the case of a female under this category. A 21-year-old, separated white woman was employed as an apprentice embalmer for 4 months. She had been sexually molested at the age of eight, and raped by a teacher at the age of 14. At the age of 20 – perhaps as a result of repeated childhood trauma – she came to regard herself as having “died in spirit”, started drinking heavily, avoided living beings and enjoyed company of the dead only. She had a very low self-esteem. During the short period she was employed as apprentice embalmer, she had sexual intercourse with as many as 20–40 male corpses. Her case is typical of class VII necrophilia.

3.9. Class IX necrophiliacs: homicidal necrophiles

This is the most dangerous category of necrophiliacs. They need to have sex with a dead body to the extent, that they resort to killing. They are also known as violent necrophiles or laggonectors (persons who kill in order to have sex with the corpse), and the practice is often known as homicidophobia. The term “warm necrophilia” may be applied to these cases, since intercourse is attempted on fresh bodies, which are recently dead.

This is the class to which Wulffen’s\textsuperscript{5} lust murderers or necrosadists belong. Many cases of lust murder belong to this category. Rosman and Resnick\textsuperscript{8} include this in their sub-class “necrophilic homicide”. They describe the case of a 25-year-old, single white male, who had a very high sex drive. He masturbated at least seven times a day, had a large collection of pornography and had committed acts of bestiality, urophilia, coprophilia, necrophilia with animals (necrozoophilia) and dead bodies in the morgue of the hospital where he worked as an orderly. He murdered an eight-year-old neighborhood girl in order to carry out his sexual fantasy.

Many murders of the American serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer (1960–1994) are believed to be of this category. He was believed to be aroused by just pieces of the bodies of his victims (he was also aroused by dead animals).

Another offender who could be listed among this category is Gary Leon Ridgway (1949 –), also known as the Green River Killer. He claimed an addiction to prostitutes and most of his victims were either prostitutes and female teenage runaways. He would return to places where he had dumped his victims’ bodies and have sexual intercourse with their corpses. It has been suggested that on one instance he left his son in vehicle while he went into the woods and undertook sexual activities with the dead body of one of his victims.

3.10. Class X necrophiliacs: exclusive necrophiles

This group, which is perhaps the rarest of all, is not necessarily the most dangerous. However this is still listed in the last, because these offenders need only dead bodies for intercourse. They are unable to perform intercourse with the living. Since dead bodies is an absolute necessity for them for sex, they may go to any length to acquire them. In as much as this, they may be more dangerous than the rest. If a given necrophile is able to perform sex with a living person of either sex or of any age, he would not be listed among this class. In Rosman and Resnick’s8 series of 122 cases, the authors could find only 6 cases which could be listed among this class.

4. Discussion

Necrophilia is a little studied subject, mainly because clinical material concerning this paraphilia is very sparse (a pubmed search with the term “necrophilia” reveals only 37 publications). Whatever little research is available, has been done by few researchers, who have tended to remain fairly insulated from one another’s works. This has resulted in different classifications and different usages of related terminologies. The best example of this confusion is the use of the term pseudonecrophilia, which has been used in at least three different senses by different authors. The current classification system attempts to do away with subjective terms like these, and introduces a more scientific mathematically graded system, whereby necrophiliac tendencies are rated from the most innocuous to the most heinous.

This classification appears to have an instinctive appeal, ranging all necrophiliacs from minimal to maximum severity. The lowest rung in the proposed classification – class I – belongs to role players – people who merely act out their fantasy. This kind of behavior is seen not only with necrophiliacs, but with many other paraphilics. For instance, many zoophiliacs are merely role players, i.e. they want to have sexual intercourse with their partners, only when they act out or position themselves as animals. These persons are fantasizers, i.e. they merely fantasize about a particular paraphilia, without actually carrying out their activity. People with exhibitionistic and voyeuristic tendencies are known, who merely fantasize about their paraphilia, without actually carrying it out in reality. From a legal standpoint, these people have no criminal liability.

The highest rungs – classes IX and X – belong to those people who are almost exclusive necrophiles. Class IX people need to kill people in order to acquire a corpse for sexual intercourse. Class X people are exclusive necrophiles, in the sense, that they are so dependent upon a dead body for expression of their sexuality, that even if a willing living partner was available to them, they would be unable to form a romantic relationship with him or her. Table 1 summarizes the major characteristics of each class of necrophilia.

This classification would hopefully be useful for other purposes too, most notably for uniform statistical compilation of data from around the world, epidemiological surveys, calculation of incidence and prevalence of this phenomena, and treatment.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Class</th>
<th>Tentative name</th>
<th>Major characteristics</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>Role players</td>
<td>Do not want to have sex with a dead person. Enjoy sex with a living person pretending to be dead</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>Romantic necrophiles</td>
<td>Bereaved people, who would mummify a part of the body of their recently departed loved ones, and keep it with them in order to get a psychosexual stimulation. Would not show a similar interest in any other dead body, i.e. body of a person with whom they were not romantically involved in life</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td>Necrophilic fantasizers</td>
<td>Fantasize intercourse with the dead. May visit cemeteries and funeral parlors and may masturbate in the presence of the dead</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>IV</td>
<td>Tactile necrophiles</td>
<td>Interest in dead bodies increases to the level of touching them. Like to stroke erotic parts of a dead body, such as breasts. May manipulate sexual organs of the dead in order to get an orgasm</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>V</td>
<td>Fetishistic necrophiles</td>
<td>Cut up parts of a dead body – say a breast – mummify it, and keep it in their possession to use it as a fetish for their necrophilic activities. Differ from class II necrophiles in the sense that they (class V) do it with the bodies of strangers with whom they held no romantic relationship in life. Thus they do not do it merely to fill a psychosexual vacuum left by the death of their loved ones</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>VI</td>
<td>Necromutilomaniacs</td>
<td>Interest in dead bodies is more than merely touching them. Necrophilic pleasure comes from mutilating a dead body</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>VII</td>
<td>Opportunistic necrophiles</td>
<td>Actual sexual activity with the dead starts from this class. Normally these necrophiles would be content to have sexual intercourse with the living, but if an opportunity arose, would not refrain from having sexual intercourse with the dead. Necrophilic mortuary attendants belong to this class</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>VIII</td>
<td>Regular necrophiles</td>
<td>The so-called “classic” necrophiles. They do not enjoy sexual intercourse with the living and prefer dead bodies for intercourse. They can however have sex with both living and dead persons. In this sense they differ from class X necrophiles, who can have sex only with dead persons</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>IX</td>
<td>Homicidal necrophiles</td>
<td>This penultimate category is the most dangerous of all, in the sense that they would kill a person in order to have intercourse with him or her. They are however capable of having sexual intercourse with the living, but the need for sexual intercourse with the dead is so great that they must kill human beings in order to have sexual intercourse with their dead bodies</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>X</td>
<td>Exclusive necrophiles</td>
<td>Sexual intercourse is possible only with the dead, with the complete exclusion of living partners</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
5. Conclusions

The paper aims to introduce a new classification system of necrophilia, taking into consideration all available literature on necrophilia. It is hoped that the new proposed system of classification would put an end to confusion centering around some necrophilia related terms currently.

Conflict of interest statement

None declared.

Funding

No funding.

Ethical approval

No ethical approval is needed.

References

2. Personal observation.
16. Ellis HH. Studies in the psychology of sex volume V: erotic symbolism, the mechanism of detumescence, the psychic state in pregnancy. Davis FA; 1923.